If your bank needs more information on StoneX such as address:

StoneX Financial Inc. 230 S. LaSalle Street Suite 10-500 Chicago, IL 60604 Note: There are four different companies that are involved with the new account process. The following explains the role of each company.

1) Cannon Trading: You are opening a futures trading account with Cannon Trading. They are an Introducing Broker (IB) located in Los Angeles, California, and have been doing business since 1988. They are a 5-star brokerage with great reviews and ratings. They offer low margins, low commissions, reliable market data, and great customer service. These are all good things that Delta traders need and want. The brokers and support staff at Cannon Trading will assist you with any questions or needs with your account. You can call Cannon Trading at 800-454-9572 if you have any questions.

2) E-futures: E-futures.com is a white-labeled entity that is operated by Cannon Trading. E-futures gives you access to trade the futures market with your Cannon trading account. The trading platform (software) that is used to submit your trades is called 'E-futures International'. You will be provided with a link to download and install this trading software on your computer (you can also download the software after logging into your Cannon account online). The trading software includes a nice DOM to place your trades similar to how you would submit trades with the TransAct Futures DOM.

3) StoneX: StoneX is the Futures Commission Merchant (FCM) where the trades from Cannon/E-futures are submitted to the exchanges for actual trade execution. In short, you are opening a futures account with Cannon Trading that is hosted by StoneX. StoneX also sends the live market data from the Chicago Mercantile Exchange (CME) that updates the Ensign Charts where the Delta Trading Group system is running.

4) Gain Futures: Gain Futures is owned by StoneX and developed the account maintenance services for the Cannon/StoneX customer accounts. When you login to your Cannon brokerage account online (to specify the exchanges that you want to receive data for), you will see that you are on a 'myaccount.gainfutures.com' web site. That is normal. If you receive any emails from either StoneX or Gain Futures, it will be pertaining to your Cannon Trading account.

In summary, your Cannon Trading account uses 'E-futures.com' and the 'E-futures International' trading software to login and place trades in the market. StoneX is the FCM that actually executes the orders for your account. Gain Futures operates some the account services and maintenance features for your account. In the end...Cannon Trading is your broker and will take care of you as a customer. We included this explanation simply to reduce confusion and clarify the roles that these companies have with your account.
